Underwater Mystery

It doesn't move. It doesn't talk. It doesn't SEEM dangerous. But it's still the strangest thing that Sammy and Corvi have ever seen.

Will these two fish friends be able to solve the ocean's most puzzling mystery? With the help of Arms the octopus, they just might figure it out!

Underwater Mystery is a story which uniquely blends imaginative and child-like characters with a mystery of modern technology.

About the Illustrator

Brenna Smith has loved painting ever since she was old enough to hold a paintbrush. Her high school visual arts instructor says, "Brenna's illustration work for

The Mystery demonstrates . . . (a) quality of interesting composition, with a playful feeling which will appeal to all ages.

Brenna created a total of 28 paintings for Underwater Mystery. In her spare time, she had a baby girl and continues to maintain her honours standings as a pre-med student at university.

About the Author

Helena Long, mother of five and grandmother of two, has been reading children's stories non-stop since she first learned to read. She also enjoyed her father's bedtime story readings for many years. She started sharing her love of stories at the age of 12, telling made-up stories and reading aloud other authors' stories to her younger brother, and later to children lucky to have her for their babysitter.

Underwater Mystery is Helena's first published book. She is especially thrilled to have been able to collaborate with her daughter, Brenna, on this project.
